Christopher Kane joined the recent trend of London-based designers heading West last night, hosting a dinner together with MyTheresa at the Chateau Marmont. Coming off the launch of his neon-meets-neutral collection with NARS, Kane and CEO Sarah Crook enjoyed a rare moment of repose with guests including Erin Wasson, Agyness Deyn, Jaime King, and Hailee Steinfeld. “I’ve always come for the fact that I love to relax,” Kane said of his trip to Southern California, which included visits to the Getty Museum and Universal Studios. “And I’ve always loved the glamour,” he told Style.com, admitting he still gets starstruck. “There’s a small hub of fashion in every corner of L.A. because they’re shooting or filming and everyone looks really good.”

Overlooking Sunset Boulevard from the Chateau’s penthouse patio, MyTheresa buying director Justin O’Shea explained the online retailer’s unconventional Kane buy, favoring runway looks over more commercial pieces. “The show is where he puts his love and energy. Everything goes into the show, and that’s what I want to represent because that’s what Christopher is.” Street-style fixture and Vogue Australia fashion director Christine Centenera, in L.A. for a shoot, also lauded Kane’s cool vibe. “What he does is so current and relevant—he always has dresses that are perfect for an L.A. starlet, but there’s a coolness to them that’s unique to him.”
