“I think the first time I ever saw Superga shoes was when Gia was wearing them,” Rodarte’s Laura Mulleavy told Style.com last night, referring to her pal Gia Coppola and the iconic sneaker brand for which Mulleavy and her sister Kate have designed a capsule line. “We go see movies together every once in a while, and each time she’d have her standard pair on.” Coppola models in the new lookbook and hosted a Chateau Marmont dinner last night celebrating the collaboration.

Jenny Lewis, Joanna Newsom, stylist Johnny Wujek, and director Todd Cole turned up to toast the six styles, due out in mid-February. The classic low-top and high-top designs are made in denim with a netting overlay, each with a contrasting tongue in snake print or croc-embossed leather. Elle Fanning is a fan. “Kate and Laura aren’t afraid of being deliberate in their work, and they don’t try to mold to a certain style or a trend of the moment,” she said, citing their Star Wars- and Wizard of Oz-inspired collections as her favorites. Speaking of collections, Rodarte’s Fall ’15 show is just a little over three weeks away. When asked for details about it—inspiration, direction, the likelihood of more skinny, high-waisted jeans—Kate and Laura weren’t talking.
